DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1, 4, 6-8, 11, 19 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 06229426 in view of Yabe et al. and further in view of EP 0223268.

Re claims 1, 7, 8, 19 and 20, JP 06229426 teaches a bearing assembly comprising a pair of bearing members (1, 2, 3) movable relative to one another, the pair including a first member (1, 2) and a second member (3) that define a space therebetween, at least the first member (1, 2) having a bearing surface having a relatively thin coating of a PTFE-based material (1a, 2a) thereupon and a grease lubricant (6) occupying the space defined between the first member and the second member, wherein the PTFE-based material and the grease lubricant act in conjunction with one another to lubricate the first and second members. JP 06229426 does not teach wherein the coating includes a thermosetting resin and wherein the PTFE-based material thickness has a thickness of about 0.003-0.007 inches. Yabe et al. teach a coating including a thermosetting resin. (Column 10, lines 24). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have included the thermosetting resin of Yabe et al. in the invention of JP 06229426 in order to enhance the mechanical strength of the coating. Further, EP 0223268 teaches a PTFE-based material thickness of about 0.003-0.007 inches. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have provided the material thickness of EP 0223268 in the bearing assembly of JP 06229426 in order to provide additional wear resistance.

Re claims 4 and 11, JP 06229426 teaches wherein the first member (12) is formed from the group consisting of steel, titanium, aluminum, nickel, bronze and alloys thereof. (Column 1, lines 5-7)

Re claim 6, JP 06229426 teaches wherein the coating is a self-lubricating material.

3. Claims 2, 5, 9 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 06229426 as modified above and further in view of Furukoshi et al.

Re claims 2, and 9, JP 06229426 does not teach wherein the coating is a PTFE-based material having a solid particulate in a form selected from the group consisting of flocked, powdered, fibrous, flaked, or beaded. Furukoshi et al. teach wherein the coating is a PTFE-based material having a solid particulate in a form selected from the group consisting of flocked, powdered, fibrous, flaked, or beaded. (Column 3, lines 23-33) It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have used the PTFE-based material of Furukoshi et al. since powdered PTFE-based materials are well known for lubricating bearing elements.

Re claims 5 and 12, Furukoshi et al. teach sliding bearing comprising a seal (17) positioned in the space defined between first and second members. It would have been obvious to have included a seal in the assembly of JP 06229426 as modified so as to reduce the amount of debris that would interfere with the operation of the bearing.

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1, 2, 4-9, 11, 12, 19 and 20 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
